'Innovate, Lead and Share: Redefining delivery of Quality Education'

INTRODUCTION

“Innovation opens up new vistas of knowledge and new dimensions to our imagination to make everyday life more meaningful and richer in depth and content”: Late Dr. Abdul Kalam

India having achieved the basic goal of establishing schools and colleges over the last six decades across the nation, the next logical progression that it aims is to re-orient these to provide quality education. The only driver that could bring in a radical transformation in this mission critical segment of the economy is Innovation. A document prepared by National Knowledge Commission indicates that innovation is a decisive parameter to help stimulate economic growth and enhance knowledge base for masses in the years to come. The Commission’s research document states: “Innovation and competitiveness have a dynamic, mutual relationship. Innovation thrives in a competitive environment and in turn, plays a key role in the achievement of such an environment. Innovation generates economic value, new jobs in the economy and cultures of entrepreneurship.”
