The month of August has been devastating for Kerala. As many houses of the State were washed away in the heavy flood, Vizagians were reminded of the Biblical cyclone that hit the city in 2014. The city of destiny has empathised with Kerala's desperation for help and it joined the cities which came forward to help the State.

College-going youngsters were at the forefront of the donation drive that was initiated to rebuild Kerala. These caring heroes of Vizag include organisations like Vizagforus and Aany, which reached people via social media platforms like Facebook, Instagram and WhatsApp and urged them to donate for the cause. These students had organised dropping points at cafes, restaurants, and super-markets, and also went around on roads and traffic signals to raise funds.

The group 'Vizagforus' collected relief material from different colleges and universities, including the Andhra University Local sector like Nanda and Hansa also contributed to spreading news about collection points through social media.

"I was able to handle things from Chennai only because my team was responsible and responsive. I hardly knew any of them, but my friends Yamini and Aparaj from Vizag were constant support for me. They kept me updated about everything that was happening," said Anusha, a student of SRM University who was working with the team in Vizag.

The team of 12 people from AU, GITAM, Gayatri Vidya Parithal etc., collected rice, baby clothes, bedspreads, blankets, packed food like biscuits, rice, sugar, CBB packets, and sanitary napkins in the first phase of donations. Now, the team is focusing on collecting things like dental, mosquito repellents, diapers, soap, mats for the people of Kerala, as many of them have returned homes.

"The collection is still going on. Our last load will be sent on Saturday evening, so the collection points will be open till Saturday. But if there is someone who wants to send boxes of relief material, we will Vizagforus has teamed up with a startup of Chennai, InbHigh, which is organising a flood-relief camp on September 1. The amount collected in Vizag, along with other donations, will be sent to help rebuild orphanages and old-age homes in Kerala.

The Aany Foundation too, has started a 'OneCityOneBad' challenge in the city and it has got a good response. Urging students to donate one sanitary napkin each, the team of 30 volunteers belonging to different colleges themselves donated a bulk of sanitary napkins and essential material to Kerala. One of the team members, Tripathi, got this idea, and later passed the challenge on Instagram and Facebook. "We have sent a bulk of material to Hyderabad recently and there is still more material to go. Other than having dropping points, we also went around to collect material if someone called us," said Anusha, a team member. The team has collected ₹20,000 in Vizag.
